GAME NOTES: Change of address for Hugh Polley and Ted Shannon. Spring 1902 due Friday NOV 30th. I should mention that a change in orders will result in previous Press not being printed unless I am specifically asked to print it.

PRESS:
Sil-Tyr: A 4-Way alliance between ART1, this is not good news either...
Sue (via Gerny): Boork de boork, zeig heil! (No, no, stupid -not for 40 years yet...)
England-Germany: Culinary arts Hell! Twice a week I have to cook for 52 other students. This from a person who has never done any cooking more complicated than scrambling eggs. In addition, if I screw a meal up, I have the comforting thought of knowing that I might be dragged across the street and thrown into the fountain. Which is physically unpleasant and very damaging to the ego. PS. Have you figured out how the washing machines work yet?

RON BROWN:

So, you've got a letter column, eh? Didn't learn from the experiences of others?

I'm actually been trying to write you for over an hour on this FIM business, but I get so consumed with anger at the way Caruso has destroyed the enjoyment of the hobby for me, that I start ranting. And, if mild-mannered me feels that strongly about what's been going on in the hobby, there must be others who feel the same way. I am sick to death with being told that hatred, lies, and any nastiness one can dream up is "fun". I'm in this hobby to play a few games, not to read meaningless and pointless attacks on my friends. If John is serious about trying to stop the harm he has done, let him show it. He has made a similar promise before in Whitestonia and then just continued right along attacking anyone who dares question his taste in humour. There is no fun in Whitestonia and Foot In Mouth no matter how often John says there is. I've been tempted to take an article at random from FIM or W and insert the names of Kathy, John, and Phyllis in place of Brux, Alex, and Rod. The articles would be just as "true" or as "fun" as the originals, except I don't think there'd be much laughing going on in Flushing. And that's the lesson I hope John learns. No matter how you label it, it is no "fun" when you're the victim of a vicious attack.

[[What's so evil about a letter column? Most of my favorite zines have them and so long as the differing points of view are presented politely there shouldn't be any fuss.]]

LU HENRY:

I'm somewhat surprised by the furor continuing over E-mail games, BN's for hidden identity of player games, etc. All a BN seems to mean is that the game has a notation to make it easier for folk to hand out ratings points to the players. I wonder how many people would really care if the entire BN system were junked. Of course a BN is a simple way to head a letter on one or more dip games, but writing out the g.m.'s name for the game isn't that much tougher. Or perhaps, people in the Dip hobby just like to argue a bunch. Running postally 15 or so non-Dip games, I'm struck at how enjoyable those other games are, that is: no arguments, no furors, and, by and large, much fewer nmr's although the games tend to last longer, e.g. on my 30th turn in a WSIM.

[[One of the main reasons I play is my desire to keep at the top of the CPC ratings. Without a controller like a BNC it would be hard to standardize postal dip games. But you're right about the people in postal dip arguing so much.]]

ALAN STEWART (New subber): I subscribed to VOICE OF DOOM for one year starting almost 4 years ago, but I just missed his game openings that year and lost interest. Why am I surprised, four years later, to find that there are still arguments about BRUX's house rules? I note that a couple of Doomies and hobby stars from that period are featured in one way or another in SK#36: John Michalski, Ron Brown, Gary Coughlan, the famous Keith "TRO" Sherwood. The "TRO" controversy was during the year I got VoD.

[[I used to like playing under Linsey's GMmanship because he was reliable and took care of his players - so long as you didn't make a mistake. I was totally against the way he handled the B3K problem however. I also disagree with his Ironclad house rules but his reliability made up for it. I prefer to GM games with a more player-friendly attitude and players MAY get away with some mistakes here that they definitely wouldn't in VoD.

TRO SHERWOOD: Just to add my 1.3cts (2cts CON) on FOOT IN MOUTH. After the outraged responses from Walker, Linsey et al, I, too went back and reread the offending material in the previous issue's FOOT IN MOUTH. Unlike Ron Brown I found nothing that was particularly obnoxious. While I can guess what certain things got certain others upset, I can't for the life of me figure why. Maybe (In fact, no doubt) there's more than meets the eye. But to the casual reader (me) there is nothing so odious that Walker would have you believe is so horrible. And Dave, I'm surprised at you for caving into what you even recognized as an orchestrated campaign against FIM. I'm on neither side (In fact, I don't find FIM particularly funny) but I certainly don't see what Walker et al

And what the Hell has John Kelley got to do with anything? Certainly not the Diplomacy hobby...

All this is water under the bridge of course since people seemed to have dropped it. This is just my impressions from the last few issues.

[[Can't say as I was happy about caving in to the Linsey toadies, however feuds, controversy and ugliness will not appear in SK. The crap surrounding FIM caught me unaware but I'm not going to perpetuate the controversy by printing more. As much as I owe John I also owe other friends in the hobby who do not want to see FIM in SK.]]

BRUCE MCINTYRE: Read a good book lately! In true postal-dipper fashion, I waited patiently for the paperback version to come out, then saved myself about $15. The book is THE GAME by Ken Dryden, and it'll be awhile before another hockey book comes out that is better (Nobody's interested in the Great One's back yard when they can read about Les Canadiens late 70's glory days, now, really). I found the section about the how the Canadian and Russian games evolved interesting, especially when you realize that Orden wrote it when the Oilers (And Russian's) five-man styles were in their infancy. Did you know that hockey was an onside game - meaning no forward passes AT ALL - until well into the 30's?

[[Yup. I've been turned off of sports by the lack of any kind of intensity by most of the players. I can forgive them for not giving their all for a whole B0 games but it would be nice to see even 1 game where the players take it seriously. As hard as it is to rank players of different era's I would have to rank Orden as my #1 alltime goalie.]]

RUNESTONE Poll 1985. Bruce Linsey will be taking over this. Bruce wants some input from hobby members on such topics as: Should subzeens be included? Should UK zines be eligible? Should you be allowed to vote for zines you don't receive? Bruce can be contacted at 73 Ashuelot St, Apt 3, Dalton MASS, 01226, USA.

My own opinion is: No, UK zines should not be included. Yes, subzeens should be ranked (Separately). No, you should not be able to vote for a zine you don't get, but I don't see how you can police this rule?

TRO SHERWOOD has a new zine called THE INNER LIGHT. $2GF + $3 NMR fee + sub of 60 cts per issue. TRO is at 8866 Cliffridge Ave, La Jolla, CA, 92037, USA. 4 week deadlines.

Apart from having a drinking problem, dressing up in penguin outfits and swearing at little kids, Keith is a old 21 years old who has had successful publishing experiences

LU HENRY: Don't even mention baseball. I am suffering a case of severe depression following the Cubs loss of three straight in San Diego. Indeed, I may be the only person in the Detroit Metro area who is refusing to watch any of the World series on the tube. Long about 4:00 p.m. on Black Sunday, my wife removed all sharps from the house. Assuming that the Cubs can replace Bowa at Short and get a quality left handed reliever (Frazier is not a quality pitcher and never was), even then next year may well be the year of the Met. Cubs to finish third behind the Mets and Phillies. Ugh.

JEFF PUNCHES: Well, that tears it!! San Diego just lost the World series and all the fun we were having here ends....it was great fun though!! I really can't believe how bad the Padres starting pitching was, it makes me wonder how they got to the World Series anyway.

[[At least you two guys support teams that made it to post season play. The joke going around Toronto now is: What do Michael Jackson and Dennis Lamp (Blue Jay Reliever) have in common? A: They both wear a glove on one hand for no apparent reason!....Relief pitching has killed the Jays the last 2 years.]]

JERRY FALKINER: When did the US pass that bill about treating foreign mail the same as domestic? It's still taking 6 - 8 days to reach it's destination.

[[Mike Warren and US PM-General Bolger signed the agreement on AUG 8th. It was to take affect immediately but wasn't supposed to be fully operational till 1985. Then again Jerry, we are talking Canadian Post Office here. Be lucky you get anything at all!!]]

BRUCE MCINTYRE: I think the world should know (So print this) that Bruce Linsey was nice enough to send me the VoD final issue free of charge, as a "sample", and that Ron Brown sent Linsey the money I sent him for two samples of SNAFU, and Linsey sent the money to me. You'd hardly believe that these people were in this feud-dominated hobby. (For those who didn't get VoD #100, it ran 270 pages - and that's no misprint.)

[[I don't think that there was much doubt that Linsey put a LDT of money, time and effort into his zine. He was also at the center of most of the hobby controversies of the last few years.]]

PRESS: Russia: Unless I miscounted something, that's all folks. If I did, well, you now have a fighting chance, thanks to my supports this turn. However, the builds of armies in Moscow and Sevastopol will enable me to set up stalemate line in a couple of moves, if that becomes necessary. (I'm not totally generous.)

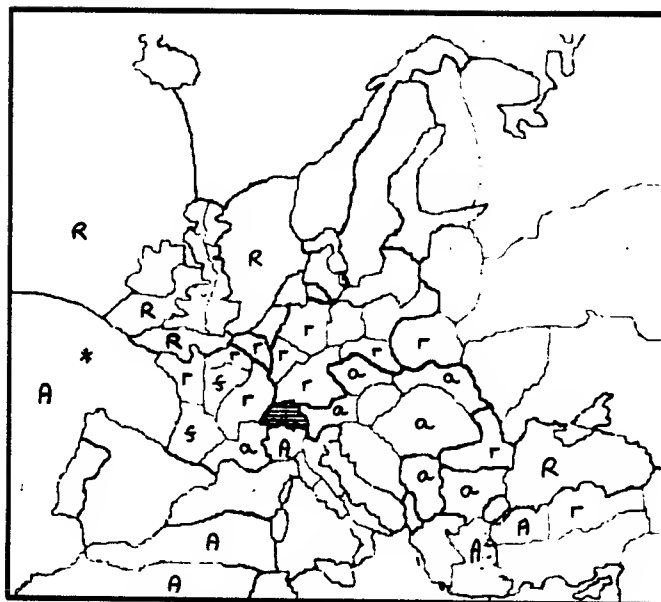

The reason I won, if I did, has nothing to do with you two who came into this too late to prevent me. It was mainly because of careless play on the part of those who went before you, and a solid ally in Austria who could have seriously challenged my lead if he hadn't NMR'd out.

Well, all's fair, etc. Thanks for keeping me guessing towards the end. And thanks to Dave for keeping this game going so reliably with no GM errors. 'Twas fun for me, at least.

Vie-Mos: You should have your win this season no matter what feats of daring-do either France's or our armies and navies accomplish. Congratulations.

Vie-Gas: I only wish my predecessor had filed close-out orders and resigned rather than NMR'd out with a waste of a season in suspended animation. Perhaps, then, we could have made the game a bit more interesting for Ron in the final seasons.

gm: I know that your predecessor did not intentionally drop out. Maybe he'll flog himself in the endgame reports.

FRED C OAVIS:

Information re "Shangri-La" and the aircraft carrier Hornet.

"Shangri-La" was not the code name for the Hornet during the Doolittle raid on Japan in April 1942. What happened was that after the raid, the Japanese expressed public puzzlement over where the American bombers had come from. (Whether their intelligence sources were really puzzled is a different matter, but all of the world's aviation experts "knew" that it was impossible for a medium bomber to take off from a Hornet-class carrier. Everyone, that is, except Jimmy Doolittle.)

Shortly afterwards, President Roosevelt made a radio address, in which he raised the issue of this mysterious raid. F.D.R. said "The Japanese wonder where our planes came from. I will tell them. They came from Shangri-La."

Shangri-La, of course, being the mysterious valley lost in the mists of Asia somewhere near Tibet or Nepal, as described in James Hilton's book, Lost Horizon. While meant as a joke, it somehow caught on, as a morale builder. So, when we began to build more aircraft carriers than we had proper battle names for in 1944, the people in the Navy who name ships began looking around desperately for more names, and decided to name one carrier the Shangri-La.

Incidentally, the report on nomenclature of U.S. carriers was not entirely correct. In addition to being named after famous battles, carriers could also be named after famous ships of the past. Hence, the names Enterprise, Ranger, and Hornet herself, were named after 18th & 19th century warships bearing those names. Star Trek fans know that there hang paintings of other ships bearing the Enterprise name in the wardroom of the spaceship of that name.

In 1945, three huge carriers were being completed, with plans to name them after big W.W. II naval battles. The first, Midway, had already been commissioned, when, on April 12th, Roosevelt suddenly died. As a sign of respect, the name of the second carrier was abruptly changed to Franklin D. Roosevelt. She was christened only about a week after FDR's death. Too late to participate in the Pacific war, but a backbone of the carrier fleet for the next 15 years. This was the origin of the new tradition of also naming carriers after famous people, such as the Forrestal, Eisenhower, and Kennedy.

The names of States used to be reserved for battleships, but with the disappearance of most BB's, today, the giant Triton submarines are being named for States, the first one being the Ohio. One Postal Dip player is a crewman on the U.S.S. Florida, and sent me some photos of her launching, and other details of the ship, a couple years ago.

NEXT QUIZ: (1) Train whistles: What does 2 long toots, a short toot and another long toot mean? (2) In the 1953 Abbott and Costello movie "Abbott and Costello Go to Mars." Where did they land? (3) A professional boxer weighs 159 lbs. What is the lightest division he can fight in? (4) In which TV program did Cousin Itt appear? (5) In 1956 Don Larsen of the Yankees pitched the first World Series perfect game. Whoever comes closest to telling me how many pitches he threw wins this question. (6) What is the State of Nebraska's nickname? (7) On July 25th, 1946 the Carrier Saratoga and some other naval vessels were sunk. Where? (8) Under US law a patent is only good for 17 years. True or False? (9) Who is "Peacelord of the Universe", Commander of the Spaceship Stardust 11? Hint: It's not Bruce Linsey. (10) How many sides to a Heptagon?

Each quiz is worth 3 issues.

Answers: Mark Weidmark 4, Dave Anderson 5, Lu Henry 6, Bob Acheson 4, Joe Stark 7, Andre Torres 9.

ANSWERS: (1) A Barsoomian lives on Mars. (2) The Ponderosa is in Nevada. (3) Spook was put in jail for calling the King a Clod. (4) Which ranks higher. Vice Admiral or Rear Admiral? - Vice. (5) Ernest Hemingway, Freddie Prince, Vincent Van Gogh all shot themselves. (6) Captains Harris, Ronald Tracey, Satak, Finner, Decker, Garrovick are all Starship Captains (7) Hawaii was the last State admitted to the Union? (8) What was the name of the Radio program that had the following introduction? "I am the whistler etc...." - The Whistler! Tough ain't they? (9) In Abbott and Costello's comedy routine, "who" was on 1st base, "What" played 2nd. The question is, what is the name of the third baseman? - I don't know (10) In conventional usage #37 is worn by a fullback.

Comments: LU HENRY: A red/yellow flag is slippery road surface, ie. oil or similar material on the racing line. Blue/yellow is you are being closely followed by another car. This generally means you should move over and allow the pursuer to pass if the other is faster than you. Vice Admiral took the middle squadron in Line-Ahead formation while the Rear Admiral took the obvious place.

GAME NOTES: Due date for Fall 1901 is Friday NOV 30th.

PRESS: Russia - World: General IKscirp ((Sorry Dave, That's what it looks like to me)) went on manouvers in the area of Sevastopol when hearing of the Turkish baths in the area. He may be transferred to the Galicioian Alps if he doesn't hear from the Austrian leader soon.
 Vienna-Mos: Don't let your big victory in B2IDgo to your head. Also, don't get any big ideas, Comrade Tsar. The center of this board will merely bog you down.

Vienna-Ank: May you long survive and prosper.
 Vienna - Rom: And may you, also, long survive and prosper.

Vienna - Ber. I would wish you also a long life and prosperity in this game, but that would be boring.

Vienna-Par & Lon: I know that the import of a position becomes more valuable the closer it is to one's dots, but it would have been nice to have heard from you.

Italy - England: Do you correspond much?

Italy - Trifkovic: I got your second(?). Are you ready for an all out ATTACK?

Italy - Turkey: Looks like you survived one thanksgiving. Let's hope you survive the US's.

GM: For the uninformed, Thanksgiving is earlier in Canada.

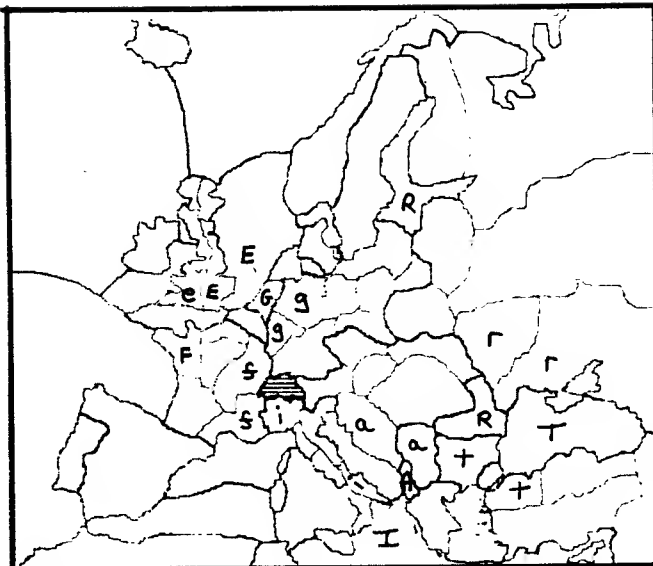

Rome - Europe: Sorry, no Papal visits for a while. Let's see how the war brews first.

You Know you're an Engineering student when:

- You can get by with 3 hours sleep a night for a week, but fall asleep at the Welcome Back Stag.
- You sit at the front of the class so that the Professor can hear you when you correct him.
- You win the Intercourse competition with no previous experience.
- Your paper airplane hits the guy ahead of you.
- You go to the wrong class but take notes anyway.
- You ask an intelligent question on a Molson's tour.
- You spend more Friday nights with a keypunch than a girlfriend.
- You put the real lab results in the real lab write-up.
- You copy somebody's problem set and get a better mark.
- You learn Swahili to understand your tutor.
- You actually finish your assignment before it's due and lose it.
- You hit the average professor twice with a better-than-average paper airplane, but can't understand why the prof smile s so much when he announces an 18% class average.
- You invent the Xerox pen.
- You find out what "S" is in a Laplace transform.

From Ron Snyder: Six year old Jerry camerunning down the stairs bellowing lustily. "What's the matter?" asked his mother. "Papa was hannging pictures and he just hit his thumb with a hammer," said Jerry. "That's not so terrible," soothed his mother. "A big man like you shouldn't cry at a trifle like that. Why didn't you just laugh?" "I did," sobbed Jerry.

This next one is also from Ron but probably won't mean anything to the single folks. It takes 11 years of marriage for this one to sink in. "Tell me Tom, who is the boss in your house?" "Well," Tom answered thoughtfully "Julie assumes command of the children, the servants, the dog and the parakeet. But I say pretty much what I please to the goldfish."

From Bruce McINTYRE: A guy went to the first pre-season game in maple Leaf Gardens with a monkey. The leafs scored 25 seconds into the first period. The monkey did a triple back flip and landed on the seat with more grace than any Olympic Gymnast. Heads turned. Two minutes later it was 2-0 Toronto. The monkey leaped into the air, landed on the back of the seat doing a handstand and flashing a toothy grin to the crowd. On each tooth was a blue maple leaf. This was too much for the guy beside the monkey's owner. "Hey, that's really something," he said, "but this is just a meaningless pre-season game. What does he do when the leafs win a big game?"

"I dunno," said our hero, "I only had'im 10 years."

Explain, Spock." Kirk ordered. Spock shifted from foot to foot, sweating profusely as he stared at the ground.

"Captain, there's not much time left. Those arches...if they hit the earth, it's all over."

"Chekov, prepare to annihilate the earth. They must be spared from the cloud's deadly attack," Kirk ordered.

"SIR!" Scotty shrieked, "There's billions of innocent people down there..."

"Who will surely die without my help," Kirk added.

This is help? Chekov wondered silently as he readied the phasers.

"But captain..." Scotty continued, "Who will be left to worship in your temples that were erected? Who will sing praises to your name? Imagine, captain, no one will thrill to the larger-than-life image you so richly deserve!" Scotty pointed out, heaping shovelful after shovelful of honey-coated sickly sweet praise on Kirk's head.

Kirk paused for a moment. "Where's Decker?"

"I think he's down in Ilia's quarters with the probe," Uhura said. Stamping down to the probe's bedroom, Kirk booted the door off its hinges.

"Decker! You're relieved of book-end duty. I'm promoting you to Photon Torpedo. Both of you report to the torpedo launching tubes immediately!" Kirk demanded.

"Wonderful idea, captain! Just what I was thinking!" Decker said gleefully as he surfaced from the morass of intestinal sewage.

Back at the helm, Kirk ordered the attack.

"Fire torpedos Decker and Ilia at the arches, Mr. Chekov." The ship shuddered gently as the human warheads screamed towards the golden core of anti-matter.

"Engineering, get us out of here!" Kirk barked over the intercom.

"Can it wait, captain? I've just torn apart the bloody warp engines to give'em a cleaning," Scotty responded from the engine room where he sat on the floor, surrounded by hundreds of warp drive components.

"Christ!" Spock said as he braced himself for the ensuing super nova-like explosion.

When Decker and Ilia contacted the golden arches, the entire quadrant was flooded in the intense, blinding glare of total matter destruction. A brief dawn greeted the Enterprise and earth as physically impossible devastating shock waves sprayed out angrily in all directions, hammering the ship and pummeling the earth.

The violent aftermath continued for a full five minutes before letting up. When the rubble cleared, there was no sign of the intruder.

The crew aboard the ship stared at Kirk in awe. He returned their glares with a snide smirk and then asked "Damage report, Spock."

"Warp drive decimated; life support devastated; impulse power ruined; Superstructure dangerously unsafe; phasers and photon torpedos destroyed; B deck toilet damaged; auxiliary back-up everything obliterated," Spock answered.

"Will she move?" Kirk asked.

"Nearly," said Spock.

"Then, take us out of here," Kirk said confidently.

"Out there," he motioned. "Thataway!"

"But sir," Sulu protested.

"THATAWAY!"

"Aye, captain," Sulu said dejectedly, and the Enterprise impacted with the moon.

The End.

DO YOU KNOW WHO CAUSES ALL THE PROBLEMS IN THE HOBBY?

According to Bob Olsen in the latest issue of COAT OF ARMS it's "The people who don't play in games." Bob's observation is that these non-players don't have the time for games but do have the time for nitpicking criticism.

"Get the nose ... they're worth 5,000 points!"

I'd appreciate some feedback from anyone who tries this out.

5. To divide numbers find the difference (instead of sum) in step 3.

4. To get your answer, have your partner bend over and get her from behind, inserting the sum. Her response will be the answer.
eg. answer (7.78) - 6.0
(3 x 2 - 6 can be verified with the HP41C)
rating(5) = 4.77
rating(2) = 3.01
sum = 7.78

2. Now your slide must be calibrated. Run your points (up to the ten mark) into your partner's watch and tell her to rate that as a 10.
3. To multiply numbers insert your points up to the first number and your partner will respond with a rating from 0 to 10. Now get the rating for the second number. Find the sum of the ratings using your and/or her fingers and toes.

1. When using your slide rule you must first bring it up to maximum operating temperature. This can be achieved by forgoing or by rigorous massaging with lithium grease (or equivalent).
